RESOLUTION # 23

Discrimination

Whereas it is state and national law that any means of discrimination against any individual or group shall constitute an illegal act, and

Because WKU must therefore adhere to this law or be suseptible to the law, and

Since it has been stated that the school newspaper, The Herald has discriminated against certain minority groups by not representing their activities and interests in areas such as:

1. This year's homecoming pageant, where the winners picture was several times smaller in size as compared to previous pageants, and the write-up on the winner wasn't nearly as long or as informative as in previous year.
2. Other assorted activities where very few photographs, if any, were published.

Another example of discrimination is in a pricess known as "hair straightening". This is the process whereby certain minority groups students press their hair with irons. Because of certain reasons, mainly the availability of stoves and sinks being in the same location, the ideal place to do this is in the kitchens of the dorms. This caused considerable turmoil, because other students felt this was repulsive. None the less, the students should not be stopped from straightening their hair in the dorm kitchens simply because the majority of the students who don't need to do this dislike the act.

Another example of discrimination is in the cheerleader selections. There are tryouts for cheering with the board consisting of no blacks which is obviously a form of discrimination.

There are numerous other exmaples, and though all examples are pertinent, the author believes that the administration is responsible for resolving what individuals and organizations are responsible for acts of discrimination, and enforcing the previously stated law.
